RECIPE OF THE MONTH

Canna-Chocolate Zucchini Bread

(Makes approximately 20 doses, and 2 bread loaves.)

Ingredients:

- 2 (1 oz.) unsweetened chocolate squares
- 3 eggs
- 2 cups white sugar
- ½ cup vegetable oil
- ½ cup Suspiciously Delicious CannaButter, melted, plus extra for greasing loaf pans.
- 2 cups grated zucchini
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
- 2 cups all-purpose flour
- 1 teaspoon baking soda
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
- ¾ cup semisweet chocolate chips

Directions:

In a large bowl, combine first seven ingredients. Mix remaining dry ingredients and combine with the wet mixture. Fold in the chocolate chips. Pour batter into prepared loaf pans. Bake for 60 to 70 minutes, or until a toothpick inserted into the center of a loaf comes out clean. Enjoy this seasonal favorite with a comfortable body buzz!

Tip of the Month/Know The Law

KNOW YOUR DOSE

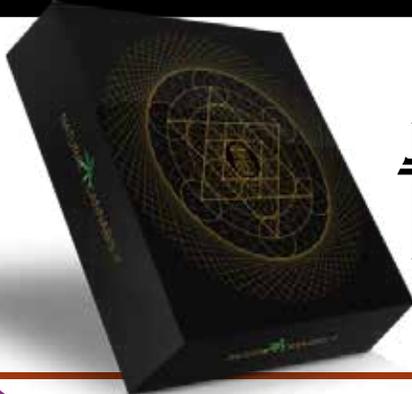

Cannabis infused treats, (or edibles) can be an excellent alternative to inhaling your medicine. However, if you are unfamiliar with edibles, it's important to know a few things before you try them.

- Your tolerance for smoking or vaporizing is not a good guide for deciding how much to eat. When you smoke, your body processes the cannabinoids differently than when you ingest, so it is best to start with the minimum dose.
- When milligram information is provided on packaging, start with about 10-15 milligrams. When it is not, ask your cannabarista for help.
- Edibles are less predictable than smoking. It can take anywhere from 30 minutes to 2 hours before full effects can be detected, so don't eat more if it isn't working right away.
- If you ever find yourself wishing you had eaten less of any edible, hydrate. Water and vitamin C are the best antidote to too much medicine.

Once you have done your research and have discovered your ideal dose, you can enjoy the huge selection of edibles at OrganiCann and Oakland Organics to its fullest!

CULTIVATING WISDOM™

JULY CULTIVATING TIP

Feeding for Flowers

Chances are you have noticed some odd changes in the weather in July. The chances are even greater that your plants have noticed. When the weather is overcast, plants may start expending more energy flowering. Although plants will continue to grow as they bloom, Potassium is no longer as important to their health at this stage. This is a good time to feed your plants nutrients that are especially Phosphorous-rich. This will encourage your plants to create an abundance of gorgeous buds for your enjoyment. If overcast weather continues into the flowering phase, it may be time to erect rain cover to protect against mold. Stake plants so they are not damaged by wind and moisture weighing down their branches. Happy blooming!
