TIP OF THE MONTH:

ALZHEIMER'S & CANNABIS

With the local Walk to End Alzheimer's (put on annually by the Alzheimer's Association,) coming to Petaluma this month, it seems a fitting time to explore the connection between Alzheimer's and cannabis. Despite cannabis prohibitionists' claim that bud is bad for the brain, new research regarding cannabinoids' benefits for dementia treatment are encouraging. Apparently, both CBD and THC show significant promise in preventing or slowing cell death, inflammation and neural plaque build-up. As with many other diseases and conditions, cannabis could also help patients deal with symptoms associated with Alzheimer's. Cannabis stimulates the appetite and regulates moods to reduce angry and irritated episodes often experienced by patients with Alzheimer's and other forms of dementia. The Natural Cannabis Company recommends discussing cannabis treatment for dementia with your doctor. For more info on the Walk to End Alzheimer's or to participate/donate, visit: www.alz.org

CULTIVATING WISDOM™

OCTOBER CULTIVATING TIP

'TIS THE SEASON

Harvest is finally here! Prepare a clean, pet-free room for processing your flowers; pet hair and dust are some of the most prevalent and damaging contaminants in fresh, sticky cannabis. Make sure that there is sufficient air flow in your drying rooms. Whether you are using drying racks or just hanging up branches, fans are a must and many farmers recommend dehumidifiers. Keep a close eye on the drying process. Too dry and your product will be less than enjoyable; if put away wet, cannabis buds can quickly begin to mold. Once your buds are dry, it is preferable to store them in air-tight glass jars, opening them up periodically to prevent any mildew proliferation. The quality of your cannabis is determined not only by your process leading up to harvest, but how your buds are treated after harvest, so give them time and care and they will reward you with many happy hazes to come!
